At Pathways Education, each one of the young people receive a highly personalised and qualitative provision using a combination of clinical and alternative therapeutic interventions, alongside a high-quality education through the delivery of Project Based Learning, English, Maths and IT. Each young person follows a personalised learner pathway to re-engage them and a bespoke transition program that will allow them to access the most appropriate provision/school to succeed in their next educational steps.

How are decisions made about who can use this service?

A young person can be referred to Pathways Education through their Local Authority's SEN Placement Team, or directly through parental requests. All young people are assessed: against the admissions criteria; by reviewing all reports; and visits.

Local Authorities: Once a referral is made, the young person is assessed, engaging with the families and the referring LA to determine suitability to the setting. If this is the case then Pathways will make the offer of a place to parents and the LA. When Pathways Education is successfully named as an appropriate provision through the EHCP process, then your Local Authority will fund the place for your child.

Private funding by parents: Parents may contact and apply to Pathways directly to consider their child for admittance. They are assessed and feedback is provided on whether needs can be met, and a formal offer is then made. Parents pay the school directly for the costs associated with this placement; these costs will vary according to the specific needs of the child. We do however, encourage all parents to obtain an EHCP for their child to ensure they get the best support for their child now and in the future.

How will families and the student engage in reviewing progress?

At the start of the placement, there is an initial meeting with the family and the student to review the EHCP, transferring it with the family into an Engagement Plan which will indicate the level of support and the strategies that will meet with success.

Pathways has a robust assessment process that tracks each child's progress in all areas of their educational provision. Each young person will outline the transition they want to make with the support of the team, they will map the journey on a termly basis and review their progress to meet their targets.

Parents and students are expected to attend at least 3 sessions per year whereby a review, which encompasses the progress around; engagement levels, emotional and mental wellbeing/resilience and academic progress are shared alongside a school report at the end of each term. The Engagement Plan will be adjusted accordingly.

An annual review will be held with all Stakeholders working on behalf of the young person.

All parents receive weekly feedback reports on their child's progress from the Tutor. Parents are welcome to arrange a meeting with the school at any time during the school year to support effective communication between school and home in order to support their child. Pathways is proactive in encouraging regular contact between its young people and their families in accordance with their agreed Engagement Plan.

How are the young people prepared for the next stage of their educational life?

A placement at Pathways Education Studio will typically run from 12 – 24 months. From the start of a placement, the school plans for the child's future. Once the young person starts to be open to discussions around moving on. In partnership with the child, parents and Local Authorities the school provides full support packages in transitioning children into their new school or the next phase of education.

Once the next setting has been agreed, we liaise with them through the SENCO or Transition Manager. Pathways proactively work with them as a school to ensure a smooth transition that is successful long term. The last term at Pathways will involve some work based on the incumbent school site with the keyworker from Pathways.
